The job of an export/import manager anywhere in the world can be extremely challenging, more so if they work with small and medium enterprises or SMEs because these organisations tend to suffer from resource constraints.

Export/import managers may, for instance, often find themselves juggling an increasing number of tasks every day – planning and coordinating shipments and supervising delivery, managing customers and personnel and ensuring that shipments comply with domestic laws as well as international export, trade and financial laws.

ranging from finance and technology skills to communication and interpersonal skills – that export/import managers must have or must develop to become better at their jobs. While some of these skills are specific to export/import managers, others are skills that anyone working in a professional space can use
